- Alfred Belwin:
 - Trio in G Major, Op. 1, No. 1 by Ludwig van Beethoven
 - Trio in B-flat Major, Op. 11 by Franz Schubert
 - Trio in C Major, Op. 87 by Johannes Brahms

- Myklas:
 - Trio in C Major by Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart
 - Trio in G Major by Joseph Haydn
 - Trio in B-flat Major by Antonín Dvořák

These trios are all well-written and provide a great opportunity to develop your ensemble playing skills. They are also all relatively easy to learn, making them a good choice for players of all levels.

When choosing a piano trio, there are a few things you should keep in mind:

- The level of difficulty: Make sure that the trio is appropriate for your ensemble's skill level. If you are a beginner, you should choose a trio that is relatively easy to learn. As you progress, you can gradually move on to more challenging trios.

- The instrumentation: Piano trios are typically scored for piano, violin, and cello. However, there are also some trios that are scored for other instruments, such as flute, clarinet, and bassoon. When choosing a trio, make sure that you have the appropriate instruments available.

- The style of music: Piano trios come in a variety of styles, from classical to jazz. Choose a trio that matches the musical tastes of your ensemble.

Here are a few tips for playing piano trios:

- Make sure that you are all in tune. This is essential for any ensemble performance, but it is especially important for piano trios.
- Listen to each other. Pay attention to what the other players are playing and adjust your own playing accordingly.
- Don't be afraid to make mistakes. Everyone makes mistakes when they are learning to play chamber music. The important thing is to learn from your mistakes and move on.
- Have fun! Playing piano trios should be a enjoyable experience. So relax, have fun, and make some beautiful music together.

Piano trios are a great way to experience the joy of chamber music. They are also a great way to improve your ensemble playing skills.
