In 2017, the United States and Canada faced off in a particularly high-stakes dual meet. The winner of the meet would earn a berth in the World Championships, and both countries were fielding their best possible teams.

One of the most anticipated matches of the meet was the 120-pound bout between Mark Perry of the United States and Mike Mann of Canada. Perry was a two-time All-American at the University of Iowa, and Mann was a two-time All-American at the University of Michigan.

The two wrestlers were friends and training partners, but they were also fierce competitors. They had wrestled each other many times before, and each match had been close.

The match between Perry and Mann lived up to the hype. The two wrestlers traded takedowns and reversals, and the match was tied going into the final period.

With just seconds remaining in the match, Perry hit a takedown and held on for the win. The United States won the dual meet, and Perry earned a berth in the World Championships.

The match between Perry and Mann was a classic, and it is still talked about today. It is a story of friendship, rivalry, and the pursuit of excellence.

The Early Years

Mark Perry and Mike Mann were both born in 1995. Perry grew up in Cedar Rapids, Iowa, and Mann grew up in Windsor, Ontario.

Both wrestlers started wrestling at a young age. Perry was a natural talent, and he quickly rose through the ranks. He won numerous state championships and was a two-time All-American at the University of Iowa.

Mann was also a talented wrestler, but he had to work harder to achieve success. He was not as naturally gifted as Perry, but he made up for it with his hard work and dedication. He was a two-time state champion and a two-time All-American at the University of Michigan.

The Rivalry

Perry and Mann first met in 2011 at a national wrestling tournament. They were both in the same weight class, and they quickly became rivals.

The two wrestlers wrestled each other many times over the next few years. They traded wins and losses, and each match was close.

The rivalry between Perry and Mann reached its peak in 2017. The two wrestlers were both competing for a spot on the United States and Canadian national teams.
