Mia is a small-town girl who has just moved to the big city to pursue her dream of becoming a professional basketball player. She's hardworking and determined, but she's also struggling to make ends meet. When she meets Jake, a wealthy and successful hockey player, she thinks her luck has finally changed.

Jake is charming and handsome, and he seems to be everything Mia has ever wanted in a man. But when he offers her a deal to pretend to be his girlfriend in exchange for free rent, Mia is hesitant. She doesn't want to get involved in a fake relationship, but she also knows that this could be her chance to finally make her dreams come true.

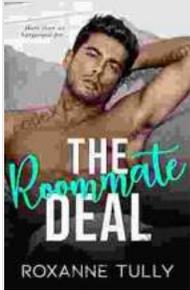

After much deliberation, Mia agrees to Jake's deal. They move in together and start pretending to be a couple. At first, it's all fun and games. They go on dates, attend parties, and even share a kiss or two. But as they spend more time together, they start to develop real feelings for each other.

Mia realizes that Jake is not just the charming and handsome hockey player she thought he was. He's also kind, compassionate, and supportive. And Jake realizes that Mia is not just the small-town girl she seems to be. She's also strong, independent, and ambitious.

As their feelings for each other grow, Mia and Jake start to question the terms of their deal. They both know that they're in love, but they're not sure if they're ready to admit it to each other. They're afraid of what might happen if they do, and they're also afraid of losing what they have.

In the end, Mia and Jake decide to take a leap of faith. They confess their love for each other, and they agree to give their relationship a real chance. It's not always easy, but they're determined to make it work.
